Airport Security in the 2000s: How Far Shall We Go?

Subsequent to the events of September 11, 2001, national airport security has become an important issue. Richard Ahlborn, assistant federal security director of the Transportation Security Administration, Albany International Airport, and Melanie Trimble, executive director of the New York Civil Liberties Union, Capital Region Chapter, will discuss the federal initiative that proposes to develop a nationwide database and identification program that will verify passenger identity prior to boarding a commercial aircraft. A question-and-answer session will follow.

The History of the Selective Service and Its Relevance in Today's Turbulent World

The continuing crisis in Iraq and other countries, the war on terrorism, and the need for security within this country necessitate the following question: Is our military sufficient to protect us? General Rosetta Y. Burke, state director of the Selective Service System, New York, and John Howe, military historian, will provide a historical overview of the United States military and discuss its state of preparedness to meet crisis situations.
The Hudson River: A PCB Cleanup Update

Leo Rosales, public affairs specialist for the United States Environmental Protection Agency, Hudson River Field Office, will provide an overview of the Hudson River PCBs Superfund Site Cleanup, including an update on the project design, progress reports, work plans, and performance standards. A question-and-answer session will follow.

Two Views of Rwanda: A Personal Story and A Visitor’s Perspective

In the United States, little is known about the 1994 genocide in Rwanda. Eugenic Mukeshimana, a native of Rwanda, will speak about her escape from her homeland and the effects of genocide on women. Catherine Wagner Minnery, an artist who visited the African nation with a relief agency in 2002, will present her experience through her artwork.

Art: The Passionate Life

Gay Malin will give a multimedia presentation about passion, art, work, and life. She is represented by galleries in New York and Rhode Island, and works for the New York State Museum doing, among other things, facial reconstructions and mastodont restoration.
